EMPOWER

The Tomorrow River Community Charter School (TRCCS) was developed with the understanding that not all students' learning styles fit within the traditional school setting; the TRCCS provides schooling options for students and families in the Tomorrow River and surrounding districts. The school spans Pre-Kindergarten through sixth grade. Students are taught in a style of whole child education inspired by Waldorf pedagogy. It is a non-competitive learning environment, fostering creative, compassionate and confident children with lifelong love of learning. The doors opened in the fall of 2013 offering schooling to all students free of charge.

HIGHLIGHTS OF OUR SCHOOL

A SUSTAINABLE MISSION

ENGAGE

INSPIRE

“Our intention is to present the world as a beautiful and wonder-filled place where anything is possible. Math IS music, science IS art, and the totality of the way the world works IS poetry. This powerful method provides all children, despite their differences, the opportunity to completely participate in their own education, cultivating compassion and respect for self, others and the natural world.”

Live Helmericks of Mountain Sage Community School, a charter school inspired by Waldorf in Colorado.

- Music, art, and movement are greatly employed in the learning process—eurythmy, watercolors, recorder, violin, knitting, wood carving and nature crafts.
- Storytelling is used to awaken imagination, retain attention and to teach subjects such as math, history, geography, social studies, writing and reading.
- Emphasis is put on nature and environmental stewardship. Children spend much time outside exploring the world around them gaining a deeper understanding of science and nature.
- Children are taught real life tasks: housekeeping, cooking, fiber arts and gardening.
- Technology is de-emphasized in the early years at school and at home.
- Foreign language begins in first grade.
- Teachers follow their students from first grade through sixth allowing teachers to develop a stronger relationship with their students, and giving them the knowledge to create curriculum based on their students’ needs and strengths.
- Main lessons (including traditional subjects) are typically taught in three to six week sessions giving children a deeper and more personal relationship with the material, leading to better retention.
- Seasonal studies and festivals.

The TRCCS opened the first public charter school in Wisconsin inspired by Waldorf pedagogy. It is located at the Central Wisconsin Environmental Station (CWES), which is part of the University of Wisconsin Stevens Point. TRCCS works with local environmental organizations and organic farms, creating partnerships to provide students and the schools’ community a greater connection to local food and the environment. Children and families participate in food production for school lunches in the on site organic garden. Students will be prepared to become stewards of the earth, graduating with the skills to create and change the world around them.
